Second Quarter 2020

President's Letter

We're in a difficult and historic time. Our country has been in rough times before, survived, and then proceeded to new heights. I'm confident that will happen again. But when you're in the middle of a storm, it's hard to have a long-term perspective. There are existential dangers to our individual health and the national economy. But it's not a time to panic; panic leads to bad decisions.

A big decision the CRA had to make recently was about our 2020 Annual Meeting (AM). We have always held those; even after "9/11" and the recession of 2008-2009. I had the optimistic opinion that we could hold the AM up until the evening that President Trump announced a national emergency and the National Basketball Association (NBA) said it was suspending the 2019-20 season. Although optimism is a good thing, we have to be realistic. At that point I knew we had to cancel/postpone the AM. I gave notice to the Doubletree hotel and, after a couple of days, they agreed to the cancellation without penalty.

Although our contract for the AM is cancelled, I am hopeful that we can reschedule and hold our AM this fall. The Doubletree Hotel in Denver indicated they are interested in rescheduling. However, the future course and duration of the pandemic are uncertain. So, we can't make any decision now. That will have to wait for a couple of months or more. We will advise you when we make a decision.

For those CRA Directors who made airline ticket purchases and other travel arrangements, we have provided them with instructions as to cancellation options and CRA reimbursement procedures.

With the cancelled/postponed AM, there are a couple of things the CRA Directors will have to do in the meantime. One is to elect a CRA President for 2020-21 and the other is to approve our annual budget for that time frame. Fortunately, we now have a procedure to do those things over the Internet. CRA Directors will be advised about the voting procedures in the near future. If other issues arise, we will handle those in a similar manner.

I have seen that many of our chapters have cancelled their recent and upcoming meetings. Those were good decisions. We all have to adapt to current reality. I'm sure we'll return to our usual schedules before long. We will post any important communications and events on our CRA website at: <http://chevronretirees.org>.

I wish each of you the best of health and stay safe. Keep your faith in a better future. Try to be positive; being negative will hurt your health. Follow the CDC and other health agency guidelines.

I'm confident that "This too shall pass". We'll return to the good old days, when the only virus we had to worry about was the computer virus.

Chevron Announces Actions in Response to Market Conditions

- Reduces 2020 capital spending plan by $4 billion, or 20%
 - Permian production guidance reduced by 20%
 - Suspends share repurchases
 - Actions protect the dividend, prioritize long-term value, and support industry leading balance sheet

Mar. 24, 2020 - Chevron Corporation announced several steps it is taking in response to market conditions as shown in the above, bullet text. "With an industry leading balance sheet and a flexible capital program, we believe Chevron is resilient and positioned to withstand this challenging environment," said Chevron Chairman and CEO Michael Wirth. "Given the decline in commodity prices, we are taking actions expected to preserve cash, support our balance sheet strength, lower short-term production, and preserve long-term value."

The company is reducing its guidance for 2020 organic capital and exploratory spending by 20% to $16 billion. Reductions are expected to occur across the portfolio and are estimated as follows:

- $2 billion in upstream unconventional, primarily in the Permian Basin
- $700 million in upstream projects and exploration
- $500 million in upstream base business spread broadly across our U.S. and international assets

- $800 million in downstream & chemicals and other

Cash capital and exploratory expenditures are expected to decrease by $3.3 billion to $10.5 billion in 2020. Total capital and exploratory spending in the second half of 2020 is expected to be about $7 billion, an annual run rate 30% lower than the approved budget announced in December 2019.

Excluding 2020 asset sales and price related contractual effects, the company expects 2020 production to be roughly flat relative to 2019. Note that Chevron's net production increases about 20,000 barrels of oil equivalent per day for each $10 movement lower in Brent oil prices due to contractual effects. Permian production by the end of the year is expected to be about 125,000 barrels of oil equivalent per day, or 20%, below prior guidance.

"The flexibility of our capital program allows us to respond to these unexpected market conditions by deferring short-cycle investments and pacing projects not yet under construction," said Jay Johnson, Executive Vice President of Upstream. "At the same time, we are focused on completing projects already under construction that will start-up in future years while preserving our capability to increase short-cycle activity in the Permian and other areas when prices recover."

In addition to reducing capital expenditures, the company is taking other actions to support its industry leading balance sheet including:

- The $5 billion annual share repurchase program has been suspended after repurchasing $1.75 billion of shares during the first quarter.
- The company completed the sale of its interest in the Malampaya field in the Philippines with proceeds over $500 million received in the first quarter. In April, the company expects to close the sale of its upstream interests in Azerbaijan and its interest in a related pipeline.
- The company continues to execute its plans to reduce run-rate operating costs by more than $1 billion by year-end 2020.

"Chevron's financial priorities remain unchanged," said Chevron Chief Financial Officer Pierre Breber. "Our focus is on protecting the dividend, prioritizing capital that drives long-term value, and supporting the balance sheet." For full story click here.

Harry Lenberger: Master Builder

Growing up in Louisville, Ky. Harry Lenberger loved working with his hands, so much so that he even considered a career in construction. But after college, he chose a job with Standard Oil (Kentucky) and retired from Chevron 38 years later as manager of Eastern States Accounting and Compliance.

During his Chevron years, his tool kit was rarely idle in his hours away from the company. Whatever the task, Harry embraced – and excelled at – it.

And then, in 2001, he really hit his stride as a home builder. He joined the Louisville chapter of Habitat for Humanity, which helps empower low-income families by constructing well-made, affordable homes that “provide a hand up, not a handout,” as Harry explained.

The program enables the homeowners “to earn their homes” by working beside Habitat for Humanity’s construction teams, taking hours of courses in home management and arranging for interest-free loans to pay off the homes.

As a member of Habitat for Humanity’s construction team for the next 18 years, Harry was a natural. “I had all the tools to do it,” he said.

And he had the motivation. “It was the most rewarding experience of my life.” “My wife always told me I had a different personality when I came home from a day of working on a site.”

Over 18 years, Harry has contributed to the construction of more than 150 houses. He is especially proud of the fact that he helped create bedrooms for 450 to 500 children.

“Nothing pleased me more than when I saw a kid looking at a new house and saying, ‘This is going to be my bedroom,’” said Harry. “I really do it for the children.”

For his first several years with Habitat, Harry worked on the homes three days a week, before cutting his schedule back to twice a week. At one point, he was assigned as house leader of a construction team.

“As house leader, I led the construction of about 12 houses,” Harry said. “But that wasn’t for me. I preferred to work with my hands, doing the actual construction work.”

He treasures his interaction with many of the people who became home owners after Harry and his team completed their work. He recalled a particular conversation with an African man whose mother was taking over one of the houses. “The son said to me, ‘Mister Harry, when I watch all you people walking through three inches of mud to work on these houses, that’s love,’”

Harry also spoke highly of Habitat’s efficient process of building homes: “The organization has building down to a science. We start off with an architectural design that goes into a computer. Once we have the model for the home, we assemble it in a warehouse with experienced people. We then move the unfinished building outside, where another team member puts up the walls and siding.”

For more than a decade, Harry also applied his skills at a central food bank in Louisville, where he performed maintenance work, doing “anything that was needed – from electricity and picture hanging to touching up walls.” The experience served as a natural complement to his work for Habitat.

Rising at Chevron

Harry retains fond memories of his career in the oil industry, in which he rose from a stock control clerk to become supervisor of the Tax Department for 17 East Coast states before transferring from Louisville to Concord, Calif., in 1978, with a focus on excise tax, before moving into his final managerial job.

Giving back to society

Harry is proudest of his post-Chevron years with Habitat, in which he has been able to “give something back to society.”

At 83, he is finally stepping down from his construction work because “my body wore out.” But he’ll continue to do occasional work for the organization in keeping with his life-long interest in working with his hands.

Second Quarter 2020

By Bill Dodge, Chair, CRA Benefits Committee

At the time of this writing in mid-March 2020, according to the Centers of Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the outbreak of the respiratory disease caused by a novel (new) coronavirus, which was first detected in China, had been found in more than 150 locations internationally, including the United States. The virus has been named “SARS-CoV-2”, and the disease it causes has been named “coronavirus disease 2019” (abbreviated “COVID-19”).

As you are aware, the rapid spread of COVID-19 has raised concerns of our national and local governments, business, and people everywhere. New information is being learned daily. Efforts have been underway to mitigate concerns by taking active and aggressive steps to prevent the virus from spreading into our communities.

The CRA Leadership Team and the CRA Benefits Committee have been closely following the updates and recommendations from leading health authorities, like the CDC and the World Health Organization (WHO) and we thought you might find these resources helpful.
